A copy of the NCC's disciplinary records concerning a member will be supplied to it at the member's request. The NCC reserves the right to publish details of any disciplinary action in a form appropriate to the action.

The following steps will be taken, as appropriate, in all cases of disciplinary action:

- Investigations: No action will be taken before a proper investigation has been undertaken by the Director General into the matter complained of, and his recommended actions have been agreed by the Board.

In addition, the members of the Appeal Panel must not have any direct interest in the subject matter of the appeal, nor will they have been involved in the decision to expel the member.

8. The Appeal Panel may invite evidence from any third party (whether a member or not) having specialist knowledge of the matters being considered by it if (at its sole discretion) the Appeal Panel is of the opinion that such evidence would or may assist it in reaching a fair decision. Such evidence is to be at the request of the Appeal Panel only. If the Appeal Panel chooses to invite such evidence, it must notify both the Board and the member not less than seven days before the date fixed for the appeal hearing.
9. Both the Board and the member must notify the Chairman of the Appeals Committee in writing, not less than seven days before the date fixed for the appeal hearing, of the identity of the person who will be representing them at the appeal hearing, together with the identity of any witnesses which they may wish to call to give oral evidence at the hearing.

Any written evidence received after that date may only be admitted with the permission of the Appeal Panel.
12. At the hearing, the Appeal Panel will first consider evidence (both oral and written) from the representatives of the Board in support of its decision.
13. The Appeal Panel will then consider evidence (both oral and written) from the member or his representative in support of the appeal.
14. There will be an opportunity for each party to cross-examine the witnesses/representatives. The Appeal Panel shall determine the length of time that may be devoted to such cross-examination, but shall permit both sides an equal opportunity of testing the evidence of the other.
15. Members of the Appeal Panel may put questions to any party or their witnesses at any time. Although the appeal hearing is not a Court and witnesses will not be giving evidence under oath, the parties and their witnesses will be expected to answer questions truthfully, honestly and fully to the best of their ability. The Appeal Panel may take into consideration in making their decision any relevant factors, including the conduct of the parties and their witnesses both before and during the hearing.
16. A contemporaneous written note of the hearing will be taken.
17. If it appears that there will be insufficient time to conclude the appeal hearing, or if the Appeal Panel considers that further evidence is necessary to enable it to make a fair decision, the Appeal Panel may in its absolute discretion adjourn the appeal hearing to such later date as it considers reasonable. If the hearing is adjourned the Chairman of the Appeals Committee shall notify the parties in writing of the date, time and place of the adjourned hearing as soon as practicable, and in any event not less than 14 days prior to the date fixed for the adjourned hearing.

On receipt of a written complaint from the member, the Director General will make such enquiries as he considers appropriate to establish whether he considers the complaint to have merit. Having enquired into the member's grievance the Director General will discuss it with the member, and will then notify the member in writing of his decision. The Director General may decide to uphold or reject the complaint.

If the member is not satisfied with the decision of the Director General he may then refer the matter in writing to the Board to ask them to review the Director General's decision. No Director who is the subject of, or in any way connected with, the complaint may participate in the Board's discussion of the complaint, the decision-making process or any vote on the complaint. The decision of the Board will be final and binding.

'Speaking for the Board' implies the need for the Chairman to be close enough to the Board's thinking to know how to respond on its behalf to issues which may emerge without notice.

9. To take the lead responsibility for identifying suitable nominations are brought forward for his/her successor at the appropriate time.

10. The Chairman may take whatever decisions, or effect any action, delegated to the Board to him/her between the meetings of the Board.

11. The Chairman's role is non-executive. The Chairman should help the Director General interpret Board policy where clarification is necessary with adjustments in changing circumstances. The Chairman is the Board's link to the Director General.

12. The Chairman should not be involved in the function of the NCC's office itself, nor with management of the staff which are the responsibility of the Director General.
13. The Chairman should aim to convey a responsive Council to membership via the committees and set a high priority on membership recruiting and membership retention – being personally involved in this role, with the assistance of the Directorate.
14. The Chairman is seen as the guardian of the company's character and conduct. It is for the Chairman and the Board to ensure that everyone knows what the company stands for and what standards of conduct are expected from them.

ANNEX 7 NCC Committee Guidelines

Board Policy

It is the constant purpose of the Board to involve the general membership as much as possible in the management of their own affairs. In staffing committees, the Board strives to select the best qualified candidates, as well as to include individuals who have never previously served on committees. The formation of new committees must be approved by the MP. New committees must, of course, serve some useful function within the objects of the NCC Constitution. The formation by committees of sub-committees for special purposes is in order; and may provide opportunities to involve non-committee members in the work in hand.

Authority

The authority of most committees derives directly from the Board. A committee is limited to specific delegated functions. No committee has any authority beyond these limits, nor may it authorise expenditures, mailings to the membership, or reports to the Press without approval from the Board or the Director General. Any report of a committee's deliberations or recommendations is premature until it has been presented and approved by the Board. Even discussions of work in progress can often be misleading, tending to generate pros and cons before appropriate action is required.

The Director General is responsible for, and has the authority necessary to supervise and correlate the work of every committee.

Committee Handbook

The MP will develop a Committee Handbook in order to clarify the roles, duties, responsibilities and purview of the Board, staff liaisons, committee chairs and members. Activities such as note taking, mailings, reporting procedures and conduct of meetings will be included. The Handbook will provide helpful information about the process through which committee projects and activities can be approved and funded; committee budgets; also included will be procedural rules about nominations for committee, appointment of new members and removal of inactive members.

Responsibilities

In general, a committee is appointed in anticipation that it will make a recommendation for appropriate action. It is the responsibility of the committee to arrive at such a recommendation, even if it should be for no action of any kind. This responsibility includes the obligation of knowing and promoting the interests and desires of the membership. A committee may be partisan in its own field, recommending what it considers the best interests of the membership. It remains for the Board to assess priorities among possible competing recommendations from many committees, or to override a committee's recommendations completely in the light of some larger NCC interest.

Each committee bears the responsibility of developing its recommendations in reasonable detail. Committee reports and recommendations shall be sent to the Committee Coordinator in written form.

The responsibility of the individual committee member is carried out by attending meetings,* studying the matters assigned to the committee, and making his or her own ideas, for or against a resolution, a definite part of the deliberative process of committee work. Rubber-stamp committee members are harmful to a committee, the Board and ultimately to the membership.

 If meetings are not called, the member should feel free to consult the Chairman to ascertain the reason.*

Committee Self-Rule and Regulation

The work processes of any committee are a matter of give-and-take within the group itself. In practical terms, a committee must find its own methods of working productively.

If a member misses three consecutive meetings without just cause, that member will be notified and asked whether or not he/she intends to serve on the committee. If the member does not intend to serve further on the committee, that member shall be replaced. The Committee Coordinator must notify the MP of these changes for possible replacement.

A committee is expected to police itself in terms of sub-committee assignments, meeting places, agendas, minutes, etc. The NCC staff are available for special purposes by arrangement of the Chairman with the Director General.

Chairman's Responsibilities

The Chairman is expected to have a reasonable knowledge of NCC procedures to be applied moderately but firmly when the occasion warrants. A ruling of the Chairman is final in matters of orderly procedure at all times. A committee meeting should, however, be informal in nature, and the Chairman will encourage individual discussion leading to a consensus before calling a vote. The Chairman is expected to make a particular effort to elicit an expression of opinion from every member of a committee on a key issue before voting. The Chairman has a right to expect common courtesy from committee members, toward the chair and toward each other.

The first order of business of any committee is to set a target date for accomplishment of its work. At the end of each meeting, the Chairman will set the date, time and place for the next meeting. Action notes (i.e., of a brief summary nature only) will be kept of each meeting (and forwarded to the Committee Coordinator), an agenda stated, attendance records kept and sub-committees assigned to specific tasks.

Generally, a Chairman may speak on either side of a discussion, but may not vote except to break a tie. In no event will a Chairman use his office, or permit others to use devices, to suppress reasonable debate or dissent. Each committee elects a Chairman, Vice-Chair and secretary.

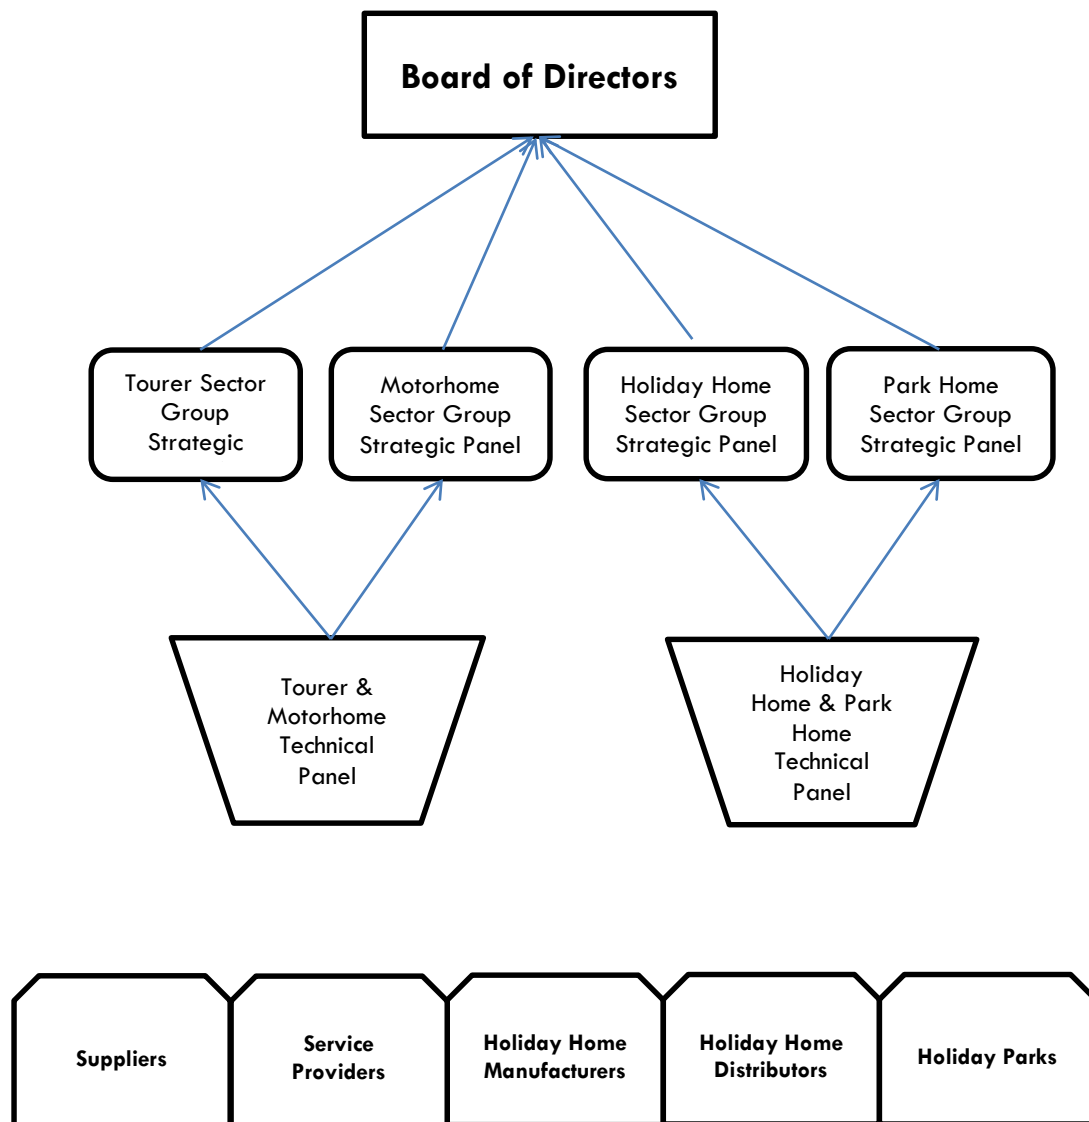

The Committee Member

Committee work is of vital importance to the NCC and it must retain continuity of knowledge on committees. In the history and experience of the NCC, a service record in committee work is one of the primary requisites for election to office. Therefore, a copy of a member's service record is made available to the MP at the appropriate time and is available to the general membership before elections. Since service on a committee should reflect only active participation, the committees on which such member is not active shall be deleted. Committee work is demanding, but creative - a privilege as well as a responsibility. The committee member's ultimate compensation is the knowledge that responsible committees affect a tangible and direct influence on the successful management of members' interests as represented by the NCC.

Staff Liaison Responsibility

An NCC staff member will attend each Committee meeting, serve as a resource to the committee, help coordinate committee activities and provide advice and information.
